It Was the Work of the American Athletes at Athens in 1896 That Started the Athletic Revival in Europe.

Copyright 1912, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York World).

LL Europe is beginning to adopt American sports. A few years ago the word "sport" was unoutside of England, and athletic ames played for pleasure were unheard of on the Continent.

Within the past three or four years France has gone wild with enthusiasm over the old English sports of boxing and Rugby football. Boxing, in fact, has been introduced in a number of ountries, and even Russia has retently opened its gates to the glove men. In France the big football matches draw rowds as great as in England-sometimes as many as a hundred thousand ectators attending a game.

Now Sweden has sent representatives over here to study the American game football. They will see the Harvard-Yale struggle next Saturday. Sweden, players, no doubt, will learn something kloging about the same from watching Kloging professionals. In a year or so the whole French nation will be baseball mad. In three or four years we'll have to meet their best teams or drop that rather conceiled claim that our interleague meeting is for the "Championship of the World".

By defeating Cline in a brilliantly played game Slosson, the old student in the same trop thinself in an advantageous position. He gets as good as second money no matter how it breaks and gets a shelter never made the sport popular all over Europe. The other nations always looked upon England's penchant for athletics as a freak. They never considered the possibility of beating England at her specialty. When the good old U. S. came along and wiped Kngland from the athletic map, easily, the Continental nations took up athletics, hoping to set a crack at England themselves and, perhaps, to show the Yankees that the old countries aren't dead yet.

A LONG that same line France is now sending us some pretty good fighters. There's Ledoux, the French bantamweight boxer, who has a fairly clear claim to the world's bantam title. Ledoux makes his first appearance in America to-night at the Farence handman title. Ledoux makes his first appearance in America to-night at the Farence handman title. Resisting that a Western trap in March would easpecially to accommodate a hundred.

If New York had a great stadium built especially to accommodate a hundred thousand speciators at these big games it could come near accommodating the crowds. The different lines converging upon New York could easily handle the one-day rush of traffic, and it would be no hardship for the students. As it is, when a game is held in Princeton only the Princeton men are at home. The Yale students have to go to New York and then on to Princeton, where they're likely to be sidetracked somewhere, as on last Saturday, and miss at least a part of the game after taking trains scheduled to arrive with plenty of time to spare. When the game is held in New Haven the arrangements are but little better. The Princeton students have the long trip, with possibility of delay on route.

Lacking a college stadium here it.

Without wishing to cause the slightest feeling of overconfidence among the players, the coaches believe that, quite different from what is the case at Now Haven, the preparation for Saturday's game is practically completed. The scouts who were at Princeton say that the playe to which Yale was committed in that game were old friends of the Harvard squad.

There will be light work again tomorrow, after which the backfield players will go to New Haven for practice on Yale Field, returning as far as New London, where the backs will be joined by the linemen on Friday afternoon.
